HISTORIA I CHARAKTERYSTYKI SZTUK WALKI / HISTORY AND CHARACTERISTICS OF MARTIAL ARTS

Dr hab., prof. UR Wojciech J. Cynarski trenuje różne sztuki i sporty walki od 1977 r. – zarówno w kraju, jak praktykując na zagranicznych stażach. Był uchi-deshi A. Floqueta (8 dan) i R. J. Maroteaux (8 dan), ćwiczył pod kierunkiem Y. Sugino (10 dan) i H. Nakamura (10 dan). Od końca lat 80 XX wieku jest instruktorem i działaczem krajowych i międzynarodowych organizacji aikibudō i aikijutsu. Posiada m.in. 5 dan w aikijutsu oraz stopnie mistrzowskie w aikibudō, aikidō/aikijutsu takeda-ryū, także w iaidō/battōjutsu takeda-ryū i nohonden kobudō. Był jednym z pierwszych nauczycieli i popularyzatorów aikibudō i oryginalnego daitō-ryū w Polsce (wspólnie ze Stanisławem Cynarskim) i pierwszym, który nauczał aikijutsu takeda-ryū. Jest mistrzem (okuden shihan) szkoły yōshin-ryū oraz liderem Polskiej Unii Takeda-ryū i Stowarzyszenia Idōkan Polska.

Dr hab., prof. UR Kazimierz Obodyński, były rugbysta i jūdōka, posiadacz 2 dan w jūjutsu i 1 dan h.c. w aikijutsu, jest członkiem honorowym SIP. Jest on m.in. współredaktorem książki Humanistyczna teoria sztuk i sportów walki – koncepcja i problemy (Wyd. UR, Rzeszów 2003) i „IRK-MC” (od r. 2000). W szczególności bada i publikuje prace dotyczące jūdō, jūjutsu, aikijutsu i innych dalekowschodnich sztuk walki (dsw).

Dr Artur Litwińiuk (nauki o kulturze fizycznej) jest zaawansowanym praktykiem aikidō wywodzącego się z aikijutsu. Ćwiczy pod kierunkiem sensei J. Wysockiego (7 dan). Jest autorem licznych prac naukowych poświęconych dsw i sportom walki.

Elżbieta Cynarska (mgr ekonomii) trenuje japońskie sztuki walki od 1991 r. Uczestniczyła w międzynarodowych stażach w Lagord – La Rochelle (Francja), Monachium (Niemcy), Krakowie, Tarnowie, Rzeszowie, ćwicząc pod kierunkiem takich ekspertów aikijutsu i jūjutsu, jak A. Floquet, R.J. Maroteaux, S. Lory (10 dan), G. Clerin (5 dan), P.P. Harmant (5 dan), G. Szepvölgyi (5 dan), H. Sieber (8 dan) i L. Sieber (10 dan). Trenowała na kilku obozach letnich SIP. Posiada stopnie techniczne w aikibudō, jūjutsu, kobudō i zendō karate. Działa w PUT i w Zarządzie SIP, pełniąc od dziesięciu lat funkcję sekretarza generalnego. Uczestniczy też w badaniach naukowych SIP współpracując z „IRK-MC”.

Aikijutsu in Europe and in Poland – present-day picture (1987–2004) / Aikijutsu w Europie i w Polsce – obraz współczesny (1987–2004)

Key words: martial arts, aikijutsu, organizational development, leaders

In the article the organizational development and the teaching of aikijutsu were presented on the background of the contemporary history of his old Japanese martial art in Europe and in Poland. The description concerns the years since the appearance of aikijutsu takeda-ryū in Europe (1987) until 2004, when one of Polish instructors obtained the master's title in one of the varieties of aikijutsu. The authors focus their attention mainly on the Chanel of transmission of the original tradition of the classical daitō-ryū and takeda-ryū schools. They describe divisions caused by the struggle for succession, power or due to other things.

An analytical method has been used based on the sources and literature as well as participating observation method and the analysis of the content of chosen specialist magazines and press.

The authors indicate that also in his field certain pluralism and multi-shaping are impossible to avoid. Changeable ways of leaders and stormy lots of new great organizations established for once elitist, ancient martial arts are probably a sign of occurring for only the last 20 years processes of democratization, institutionalization and even globalization of aikijutsu.

Introduction

The authors aimed at describing and explaining the state and organizational development as well as teaching aikijutsu viewed on the background of the contemporary history of this old Japanese martial art in Europe and in Poland. The description concerns years from appearing aikijutsu takeda-ryū in Europe and aikibudō in Poland (1987) till the year 2004 when one of Polish instructors received the title of shihan in aikijutsu. Earlier – before 1987 – a French instructor Alain Floquet taught selected techniques from the daitō-ryū school in Europe but he did it within his own system called aikibudō CERA [Floquet 1989].

Apart from the analysis of source materials and literature of the subject many facts are known to the authors (especially to W. J. Cynarski and E. Cynarska) from direct or indirect participation.

Terminology

Aikijutsu is a typical, Japanese kind of martial art. Associating it with sport is valid only when it concerns not exactly sporting competition, which does not almost take place here (with the exception of the takeda-ryū school of master H. Nakamura¹), but when we refer to rather strenuous physical training the competence of the instructor and the participation of those who train. Once it used to be an elitist art done by aristocratic families of middle-aged Japan but today it fulfills the criteria of so-called sport for all.

Aikibudō is the most general term and it indicates different ways of martial arts in which the superior principle is aiki – the harmony of opposite energies. The aikibudō system of Alain Floquet consists of both classical forms (daitō-ryū techniques) and evolutionary ones (yoseikan schools). On the other hand the term aikijutsu refers to old techniques from traditional schools or to their utilitarian values. The term aikido is associated with the system popularized by Morihei Ueshiba (1883–1969) and his disciples. However, certain schools, like yoseikan of Mochizuki² and takeda-ryū of Hisashi Nakamura, also use the terms aikidō and aikidō / jūjutsu [Maroteaux, 1993 a; compare Cynarski, Litwiniuk 2002–2003] despite teaching classical techniques. It results from stressing the moral and educational dimension (the element dō – Jap. ‘way’) of practicing martial arts. On the other hand in International Martial Arts Federation/Kokusei Budo Renmei (IMAF³), the leader of which being professor Shizuya Sato (jūjutsu expert – 10 dan, hanshi, also 6 dan in akijutsu) aikijutsu is identified as one of kobudō – the set of classical, traditional martial arts.

Historical research of aikijutsu

One of the first Europeans who undertook research on the aikijutsu tradition was Alain Floquet. In 1973 he established the Centre of Studies and Research on Aiki and Kobudo (Cercle d’Etude et de Recherche en Aiki et Kobudō, CERA) in Grigny near Paris. He introduced classical aikijutsu daitō-ryū as passed in sōke by Tokimune Takeda to Europe and he set up a proper shibu – a branch of daitōkan school.

A few years later another French aikidōka and a hakkō-ryū jujutsu instructor, dr Roland J. Maroteaux met the present 44th sōke of the second main line of transmission of the old aikijutsu – master Hisashi Nakamura 10 dan and he visited the seat of the takeda-ryū nakamura-ha (hombu dōjō) school – Nippon Sōbukan in Tokyo [Maroteaux 1987; Cynarski 1997 a].

The area of aikijutsu has so far been studied by hoplologists (as D. D. Draeger [1987]) to a small degree and not precisely interpreted by originating from the aikidō background sociologists (as Ratti and Westbrook [1997]). The latter ones mix legends and facts promoting Ueshiba’s aikidō at the cost of aikijutsu which has been described in quite a critical manner and only in the past tense [Cynarski 2001]. A systematic interpretation of this cultural phenomenon has been done on the ground of the humanist theory of martial arts – in the aspects of evolution, institutionalization and globalization [Cynarski 2004 a; Cynarski, Obodyński 2005 a; b; c].

The lover of old budō (or kobudō) Alain Floquet introduced the old and famous Japanese daitō-ryū school (the School of the Great East) of aikijūjutsu to Europe (1984). Floquet’s intention was to go from the contemporary forms of aikidō back, to the roots and to combat techniques of the noble families of old Japan [Floquet 1989]. However, he popularizes mainly the method and techniques of the yoseikan school of M. Mochizuki [Cynarski 2004 c] – the master who promoted him to 8 dan⁴. On the other hand Maroteaux after years of studies and searching became the first shihan – the master – professor of the takeda-ryū school in Europe. His knowledge and skills were evaluated to 6 dan by Nakamura. Later though, a higher degree (7 dan) was gained by the competing with Maroteaux instructor Siegfried Kobilza from Vienna.

Shihan Maroteaux (8 dan aikijutsu, hanshi) is an amateur-historian and he sometimes combines facts and legends included in traditions of the martial arts schools, as it is in the case of Shiro Omiya [1999] or other ‘story-tellers’ about the amazing and ancient origin of aikijutsu.

² Minoru Mochizuki (1907–2003) was a disciple of „early” Morihei Ueshiba. Dōjō in Shizuoka.

³ International Martial Arts Federation / Kokusei Budo Renmei (Tokio, Japonia).

⁴ In daitō-ryū aikibudō Floquet has 4 dan.

Werner Lind claims that S. Oba, Nakamura's teacher, got familiar with aikijutsu not in the takeda-ryū gen-ryū line but in Sōkaku Takeda's school (daitō-ryū) [Lind 1996, p. 841]⁵. Serge Mol doubts about the ancient origin of these schools on the basis of lack of preserved densho scrolls before the period of Sōkaku Takeda's teaching [Mol 2003]. Undoubtedly the masters and leaders of Japanese schools (it also applies to other far-eastern martial arts) try to enlarge their prestige by proving their old and legendary roots. Long history, relations with historical rulers and heroes should sanctify the content of contemporary schools teachings.

⁵ Is Ichio Oba, who was the former sōke takeda-ryū and the teacher of Hisashi Nakamura, the same as the one mentioned by Lind?

The martial arts master Sōkaku Takeda (1860–1943) had many disciples in Japan. One of the most famous ones is the originator of aikidō Aikikai Morihei Ueshiba [Rzany, Cynarski 2001; Śliwka 1998]. However, the creator of the contemporary daitō-ryū school passed it to his son Tokimune Takeda (1916–1994), who established the main dōjō: daitōkan in Abashiri on Hokkaido.

Minoru Mochizuki was the disciple of „the early Ueshiba”, first teaching a system related to daitō-ryū called aikibudō. M. Mochizuki and T. Takeda’s, as well as teaching in France representatives of daitokan sensei Akira Yazawa and Munemitsu Takeda’s⁶ disciple is Alain Floquet [Cynarski 1990 a].

Two disciples and assistents of S. Cynarski: W. J. Cynarski and Andrzej Bieś as uchi-deshi trained with kyōshi Floquet in 1989. Both finished the three month training with the degeree of 1 kyū in aikibudō CERA. Their departure had been preceded by two one week trainings in Tarnów, organized by S. Cynarski and conducted by leading technique practitioners of CERA – L. Lefranc (4 dan) and L. Chaigneau (3 dan). In a short time Floquet promoted the sensei from Tarnów to 1 and 2 dan. Thanks to Floquet and his Polish disciples kobudō katori shintō-ryū according to master Yoshio Sugino (10 dan kobudō and aikidō) came to Poland.

The pioneers of daitō-ryū in Europe were then A. Floquet and G. Clerin, and to kodansha (of black belts of a higher range) school of Floquet belonged then Christian Brun, Daniel Dubreuil (at present 6 dan FIAB and CERA⁷), Paul-Patrick Harmand (also 6 dan). In 1988 the instructor Stanisław Cynarski from Tarnów joined CERA and became the representative of master Floquet and of his aikibudō system in Poland. In particular during one of the trainings in Tarnów, conducted by French instructors G. Clerin (5 dan CERA, 2 dan daitōkan) and P.-P. Harmand (4 dan CERA, 1 dan daitōkan) three Polish instructors of jūjutsu joined the European shibu daitō-ryū: S. Cynarski (having then 1 dan CERA), W. J. Cynarski (1 dan CERA) and Roman Grzegorz from Głogów. As far as the techniques and traditions of daitō-ryū are concerned S. Cynarski remains until today the best specialist in Poland [Cynarski 2005 b].

During the summer training 1991 in Lagord near La Rochelle in France the establishing congress of the Federation International d’Aiki et Kobudo (FIAB). An international federation came to life in order to establish a formal organizational structure which would embrace the teachings of master Floquet in a few then European countries and the French-speaking part of Canada (Quebec).

The above- mentioned Polish pioneer of aikijutsu S. Cynarski set up the Centre of Aikibudō and Kobudō in Poland (CAKP) in 1987 in Tarnów and registered it with the Polish Federation of Far-Eastern Martial Arts (Polska Federacja Dalekowschodnich Sztuk Walki – PFDSzW) in Warsaw. He became the president and the technical director of CAKP and then of the Polish Union of Kobudō and Aikibudō (PUKiA) as well as the vicepresident of PFDSzW for aikibudō. For the post of the secretary of CAKP and PUKiA W. J. Cynarski from Rzeszów was appointed, who popularized this martial art by publishing papers in, among others, a journal of PFDSzW „Czarny Pas” (“The Black Belt”). At that time W. J. Cynarski was also a regional instructor – coordinator of aikibudō and kobudō for the area of Małopolska. The centres in Tarnów and Rzeszów [Jakubowicz 1994] were then the strongest in the country. In 1992 sensei S. Cynarski passed the leadership of PUKiA to Wojciech, which was announced in his dōjō. He also left PFDSzW, where his place was taken over by W. J. Cynarski. The latter moved the seat of PUKiA to Rzeszów [Krowiak 1992]. The new leader conducted the first course for instructors of aikibudō and kobudō, organized under the guidance of PFDSzW in Warsaw (with the use of his original program) and he represented Poland at the Congress of FIAB in Lagord in France. In the meantime S. Cynarski established other two associations in Tarnów and the Polish Federation of AikiBuDō and KoBuJutsu (PFABKBJ).

There was a conflict about the position of the leader in Poland, which Floquet refused to settle treating both organizations equally [Cynarski 2005 a]. After the period of two-year rivalry cooperation was established – W. J. Cynarski joined PFABKBJ, where he became the president of the Committee of Kobudō Katori Shintō-ryū⁸ and S. Cynarski joined (with the centre in Tarnów) the Idōkan Poland Association (SIP) and shibu kobudō SIP with the seat in Rzeszów. In 1994 W. J. Cynarski received 2 dan in aikibudō in PFABKBJ and S. Cynarski 3 dan h.c. aikibudō with SIP. When S. Cynarski joined the Polish Centre of Jiu-Jitsu “Goshin-ryū” (PCJJ) of dr. K. Kondratowicz 10 dan and PFABKBJ ceased existing aikibudō and kobudō are still taught in Rzeszów within SIP [Draus 2004] as well as in Tarnów where the group is led by one of the former sensei Stanisław’s disciples – Paweł Kliglich.

⁶ Munemitsu Takeda 6 dan was, after the death of Tokimune, the official 27th sōke daitō-ryū aikibudō, but the right to this title also claim to have: shihan K. Kondo 7 dan and Tokimune’s daughter – Masanobu. Compare: D. Zięba (1996), Daito-ryu aiki jujutsu na rozdrożu, „Samuraj”, no. 4, p. 13; www.daito-ryu.com.

⁷ The private CERA school and the FIAB association are located in Grigny (France).

Due to the fact that the problem of the aikibudō leadership has not been solved – i.e. who is the official representative of Floquet, S. Cynarski left FIAB and CERA. As suggested by Wojciech J. Cynarski Stanisław started cooperation with Jan Janssens from Belgium (Ravels), a disciple of Kobayashi, Floquet and Sugiyama and Wojciech’s friend. Janssens was first the leader of the Aikibudō – Kobudō Belgium organization (having 2 dan in aikibudō, 1 dan in kobudō), later he represented aiki-jūjutsu yoseikan of Mochizuki and Sugiyama, receiving 4 dan. The Belgium organization IMAF-Europe gave Janssens 6 dan and since then he has been teaching his own aiki-jūjutsu program. It was Janssens with whom Stanisław passed technical exam for 3 dan in February 1998, and e.g. Robert Wyskiel (who left PUT and SIP) and the Russian instructor of jūdō and sambo Tair Narimanov – for 1 dan. Finally S. Cynarski ended his cooperation with Janssens and registered his own program of teaching *aiki-jūjutsu*⁹ in PCJJ. It includes techniques and forms from aiki-yoseikan and daitō-ryū. Kondratowicz promoted the sensei from Tarnów for further degrees of 4–6 dan. In the meantime J. Janssens received the honorary 7 dan degree in 2004 and he participated in the training which took place in Belgium with the participations of R. Yamanaki (9 dan jūjutsu) and R. J. Maroteaux (8 dan aikijutsu) [Desveaud 2004].

After the death of master Tokimune Takeda K. Kondo 7 dan left daitokan. In July 1999 Paweł Wołosewicz (3 dan in the line of K. Kondo) conducted the daitō-ryū aiki-jūjutsu seminar in Łódź. A derivative of daitō-ryū is also the teaching of master Keido Yamaue 10 dan – yamaue aikijutsu. In Poland the jūjutsu instructor, Marek Pantkowski [2002], a former disciple of S. Cynarski and M. Śliwka is concerned with this program.

It is worth noting other historical clues (in the master of teaching techniques and channels of transmission) of classical aikijutsu in other martial arts. Sensei Kotaro Yoshida from daitō-ryū taught Masutatsu Oyama the techniques of tantō and shurikenjutsu (hurling blades) fighting [Lind 1996]. Therefore shurikenjutsu is a part of the technical program of the founded by Oyama kyokushin karate school. Practically in this style oriented towards sporting fight this technique is not practiced. It is trained, however, in the kobudō program of SIP (idōkan yōshin-ryū). Also many techniques of hand-to-hand combat originating from aikijutsu survived in the form close to original in Korean hapkido, the main being a Korean counterpart of aikidō (in the translation) and as it is known the creator of hapkido Yon Sul Choi trained in the daitō-ryū school.

The son of the creator of the contemporary aikidō – Kisshomaru Ueshiba indicates that Morihei in 1910–1923 „with unusual attention learned the old forms of jūjutsu. If he had remained loyal to just one school there would not have been aikidō, because aikidō – although one may find elements of tradition in it – in fact is a dynamic part of contemporary society” [Ueshiba 2002, p. 146]. After the death of master Minoru Mochizuka his son inherited the yoseikan school – living in France Hirō and in Italy shihan Shoji Sugiyama teaches (8 dan aikidō yoseikan, 9 dan aikidō IFNB¹⁰, hanshi).

Apart from yoseikan and aikibudō of Floquet (CERA, FIAB) one must take into consideration a derivative of daitō-ryū – hakkō-ryū jūjutsu. This traditional in its concept school was brought to France and Europe by Roland J. Maroteaux (1973). His former disciple Thierry Rissier alias Shizan Okuyama, 8 dan in hakkō-ryū, set up the school or style of okuyama-ryū aiki-jūjutsu. A Polish disciple and representative of Rissier is Zenon Liszkiewicz (5 dan, shihan) from Krakow. Another jūjutsu instructor from Krakow (having 1 dan in aikidō) and At the same time the first teacher of

¹⁰ International Federation of Nippon Budo, Torino (Italy).

Lisziewicz, Michał Śliwka also calls the program taught in his organization (the Krakow Academy of JuJutsu) aiki-jūjutsu or „aikibudō-jūjutsu” referring¹¹ to the Floquet’s system.

Stanisław Cynarski received 6 dan and the shihan title in July 2004 from PCJJ and K. Kondratowicz [Jastrzębski 2004]. Among those who have the highest degrees in aikijutsu or aikijūjutsu in Poland are also disciples and assistants of S. Cynarski: W. J. Cynarski 4 dan [Borowiec 2004] and J. Jastrzębski 3 dan from Krakow. Although in case of martial arts in Japan the evolution passed from aikijūjutsu through aikibudō to aikidō, in case of the dōjō of sensei S. Cynarski in Tarnów the direction was just the opposite. This sensei’s style has been influence by his experience from the jūdō and aikibudō training, teachings of A. Floquet, H. Mochizuki (8 dan), J. Janssens and K. Kondratowicz (10 dan jūjutsu). He also practiced with other famous sensei. In 1997 S. Cynarski was a member of PUT and EST as well as – for some time – SIP (Rzeszów). He worked with PFDSzW (Warsaw), PFJJ (Krakow) and again with PFDSzW. In April 2001 Polish Federation of Aiki-Budo and Ko-Bujutsu with its seat in Tarnów ceased existing. But the Polish Association of Aiki-JuJitsu (PSAJJ) is still active in Tarnów¹².

Takeda-ryū aikijutsu

Soke Hisashi Nakamura ("Aiki Goshindo Kal Shi")

A separate channel of transmission concerns takeda-ryū and master Nakamura. Nakamura first chose M. Werhahn-Mees (2 dan aikidō, iaidō) from Luxembourg for his European sōke representative. His second European favorite was dr Maroteaux, who received high degrees of 6 dan in aikidō, 5 dan in iaidō and 5 dan in jōdō takeda-ryū as well as the title of jōden-shihan. Maroteaux together with his disciples established European Sobukai Takeda-ryū (EST) in Avignon. Therefore the pioneers of sōbudō takeda-ryū in Europe were Monica Werhahn-Mees and especially (since 1987) R. J. Maroteaux [Maroteaux 1993]. Maroteaux also taught and popularized his system in Africa and the USA. His first Polish disciple and uchi-deshi was W. J. Cynarski.

As a result of a conflict with master Nakamura (since 2nd Congress of EST, Liège, 6–8.05.1995) Maroteaux established his own line of teaching called takeda-ryū maroto-ha, as well as ESTAM and WTMF. In July 1997 Nakamura deprived the French leader of his entitlements and promoted Austrian Sigfried Kobilza, conducting ISTB, for 7 dan, giving him at the same time a high title of okuden-shihan [see: chart in appendix III].

¹² Based on the interviews with S. Cynarski conducted by W. J. Cynarski and from direct observation.

Dr Maroteaux is a philosopher and a writer, an autor of numerous articles and books devoted to martail arts including those concerning jūjutsu and aikijutsu. He describes knight traditions and the biography of a famous Japanese politician and strategist Takeda Shingen, He Publisher „Aiki Goshindo Kaishi” – Revue Culturelle Franco-Japonaise d’Arts Martiaux Takeda-ryu etc. His thoughts on the philosophy of martial arts are very interesting¹³. In reality the personality and knowledge of a given master influence the specificity of his school. It also applies to the schools of S. Takeda, H. Nakamura, R. J. Maroteaux and others. Another thing is that certain ideas, rules and techniques are very old, earlier practiced as a secret in Japanese aristocrat families of Minamoto, Takeda and Aizu.

European Samurai – sensei R.J. Maroteaux [WTMF]

Arts Martiaux Takeda-Ryu

Maroteaux introduced to Europe the style of hakkō-ryū genetically related to daitō-ryū, and then he abandoned this school and his experience and skills in aikidō and jūjutsu transformed into ‘aikigoshindō’. Later in 1990–1996, he propagated original aikijutsu teaching according to the takeda-ryū nakamura-ha school. At present in Europe the French expert competes with Kobilza from Vienna and this shihan still represents Nakamura sōke [Maillet 1993; Kobilza 1998]. Both forms have a chance to gain many followers among those who practise aikidō [see: Litwiniuk, Cynarski 2003], who look for the roots of their art or try to reach the sources of the original aikijutsu.

In 1993 W. J. Cynarski made contact with master Maroteaux and EST [Maroteaux 1993 b]. The next year the classical aikijutsu in the nakamura-ha version was discovered for Poland. W. J. Cynarski after his training in Avignon and his uchi-deshi practice (internal, direct disciple) with shihan Maroteaux introduced sōbudō (a set of martial arts) of takeda-ryū – especially aikidō (aikijutsu). Polish Union of Takeda-ryū was established, which S. Cynarski was a member of for two years. During one of the next trainings in Mangalia (Romania) Maroteaux promoted W. J. Cynarski for 2 dan in aikidō / aikijutsu takeda-ryū (Mangalia, 11.07.1996) [compare: Obodyński, Cynarski, Litwiniuk 2005; Cynarski 1994 a; b; c; Jakubowicz 1994; Kłos 1994].

Teaching of sensei W. J. Cynarski – Chłapowo and Strzyżów

In April 1994 sponsored by PUKiA and SIP a training seminar with shihan Maroteaux was organized in Krakow. Polish Union of Takeda-ryū (PUT) was established. Next sensei W. J. Cynarski participated in several international EST trainings and in European iaidō (kumi battō shiai) tournament [Kłos 1994; 1995; Cynarski 1995 a; b; 1997 d; e; 2000; 2004 b], he received master's degrees, licences and then (1999) membership in „Conseil Suprême International” of the European Sobukai Takeda-ryū Maroto-ha federation consisting of 7 people. This style was at first practiced only in the Rzeszów Center of „Dōjō Budōkan” (Rzeszów and Strzyżów). Later W. J. Cynarski's disciple – R. Wyskiel (2 kyū) – conducted trainings of aikidō takeda-ryū section in Przemyśl for a few years. In organizational terms PUT was a status unit of SIP and for some time also of PFDSzW, where PUT replaced the PUKiA (in Rzeszów) organization. In 1994 W. J. Cynarski and R. Wyskiel¹⁴ were elected for the management of EST.

At the beginning (1990s) the leader of the European Sobukai Takeda-ryū¹⁵ was Maroteaux Minamoto-no Maroto, and among advanced instructors were the French: Serge Charlopeau (5 dan aikidō, 3 dan iaidō, 1 dan jōdō), Ahmed Hank (5 dan aikidō, 2 dan iaidō, 1 dan jōdō), Claude Chantegrel (4 dan aikidō, 3 dan iaidō, 1 dan jōdō) as well as Richard Gillet (5 dan jūjutsu, 2 dan iaidō, 1 dan jōdō) from Belgium and an Austrian S. Kobilza (5 dan jūjutsu). The pioneer in Romania and the organizer of first international trainings on the Black Sea was at that time Gabriel Dutkiewicz (1 dan).

At present within the European Sobukai Takeda-ryū Maroto-ha (ESTAM) supervised by dai-shihan Roland J. Maroteaux operate among others Charlopeau (6 dan aikijutsu, jōden shihan) in France, a former disciple of Dutkiewicz Cristian Laiber (5 dan) in Romania, a former disciple of Gillet Éric Van Antwerpen (5 dan aikijutsu takeda-ryū maroto-ha, 3 dan jūjutsu takeda-ryū nakamura-ha) in Belgium. The Belgia diplomat Van Antwerpen teaches and popularizes classical techniques of the school. In his book high efficiency of strikes, strangles and levers taught in aikijutsu takeda-ryū are confirmed by: B. Rosu, MD, dr Y. L'Hoest, osteopathy specialist and dr of physical education, kinezytherapist É. Rosu [Van Antwerpen 2005, pp. 131–136; compare: Kogel 2001]. Private schools and organizations from Greece, Spain, Cuba, Malta, Morocco and a few Rother countries cooperate with his master's organization.

H. Nakamura (born 1932, 10 dan aikidō, 9 dan nihon jūjutsu, hanshi), okuden shihan S. Kobilza¹⁶ (7 dan) and ISTB operate separately and they assemble clubs from: Austria, Belgium, France, Spain, Holland, Luzemburg, Germany, Romania and Switzerland. In Graz (2004) first official European Championships in aikidō (takeda-ryū) were organized, and in Vienna in summer 2004 – the Congress of Sōbudō Takeda-ryū (Budo Congress ISTB). In the nakamura-ha school the whole spectrum of methods and ways of the traditions of the Takeda family is taught under the names of sōbudō takeda-ryū: aikidō and jūjutsu, iaidō, jōdō, jū-kenpō, kendō, shuriken, shugijutsu and bujutsu idō. Additionally thanks to master (kaiden shihan) Toshihisa Sofue (born 1943, 8 dan, also 7 dan nihon jūjutsu, 7 dan karate) karate shitō-ryū is taught here. The titles of okuden shihan of the Nakamura school were also obtained by: Miyoshi Morita, Masayuki Toyoshima, Junichi Matsushita, Pierre Glorion (born 1955, 7 dan aikidō, 6 dan iaidō, 6 dan jūjutsu, 5 dan jōdō, 5 dan jū-kenpō, 5 dan kendō) and Günter Fleischer (born 1972, 7 dan aikidō, 6 dan iaidō, 5 dan jōdō, 5 dan jū-kenpō, 5 dan kendō, 4 dan jūjutsu). This school is represented by e.g. the Dutch okuden shihan Ib Nyborg, jū-kenpō (7 dan) specialist.

¹⁴ „Aiki-Goshindo Kaishi”, Revue Culturelle Franco-Japonaise d'Arts Martiaux Takeda-ryū, Avignon, 1995, no. 15, pp. 4–7. [Compare photos in: Cynarski 2000]. For the new EST board 3 French, two representatives of Belgium, Poland and Italy and one representative of Romania were chosen.

¹⁵ EST was supervised by Nihon Sobudo Rengo Kai i Nihon Sobudo Kokusai Renmei. EST was established in Avignon in 1990, while ISTB – two years later.

On the basis of the program of the Nakamura school as well as in connection with the teaching of shihan Maroteaux and the methodology of M. Mochizuki and Floquet sensei W. J. Cynarski prepared aikijutsu program for PUT and SIP [appendix II].

Other varieties

Apart from takeda-ryū nakamura-ha (ISTB) and takeda-ryū maroto-ha (WTMF, ESTAM) other varieties are taught which are more or less properly called aikijutsu, aiki-no jutsu or aiki-jūjutsu. The disciple of master Toshishiro Obata Brent Hire from Amsterdam promotes Shinkendo – Aikibuken Federation. Aikijutsu as taught by Obata is said to be a derivative of daitō-ryū. Also those who have high degrees in aikijutsu, such as Daniel Blanchet 9 dan (also 10 dan jūjutsu and 8 dan karate) in France or Mitsuhiro Kondo 7 dan kyōshi (also 9 dan jūdō, hanshi) in Switzerland have their own schools. Jean-Claude Verdon (6 dan aikijutsu, 5 dan kobudō, 4 dan karate) teaches a system called busankai. At the end of 1980s and at the beginning of the 1990s the technical director of the European JuJitsu Union (EJJU) from Vienna dr Heribert Czerwanka-Wenkstetten called the system taught there aikijutsu. Later, however, he started calling his style kawaishi-ryū. His Polish disciple is Krzysztof Staniszewski (7 dan) from Poznań. Perhaps due to devaluation of master's degrees in many organizations of jūjutsu and associating jūjutsu with any form of self-defence (a mixture of jūdō, karate and aikidō) numerous instructors of jūjutsu try to find connections with aikijutsu. The Belgian instructor J. Bernaschewice had 7 dan in jūjutsu and lower master's degrees in iaidō and aikidō. After obtaining a honorary degree of 8 dan in his organization He called his school chi-ryu aiki-jūjutsu. The representatives of chi-ryu aiki-jūjutsu in Poland are: Józef Góra (Oświęcim) and Ireneusz Druciarek (Szprotawa). J. Góra received 6 dan from John Bernaschewice in 2003.

Undoubtedly eccentric systems hale less in common with the original forms like the one taught and created by „sōke” Brian Dosset (10 dan) called „Spirit Combat” consisting of jūjutsu and aikijutsu. Christopher Nasilowski 8 dan from the Millennium School of Martial Arts (Australia) and Mirosław Osytek 4 dan from Poland are Dosset's disciples [A.T. 2002].

Another issue is the way the idea of aiki is used in various contemporary schools and varieties of martial arts. Besides aikidō and jūjutsu the aiki principle is realized in the zendō karate techniques taught by master Lothara Siebera and related to it the concept of continuous motion idō (Sieber has 10 dan in idō) is the basis of the whole idōkan budō system [Cynarski 1997 b; c].

Aikijutsu in Polish writing

In 1991 the magazine „Karateka” showed master Nakamura in one of four photos on the page of „aikido”¹⁷. There was no inscription explaining who is in the photo or what he is practising. On the cover of edited by W. J. Cynarski „Biuletyn Informacyjny Aikibudō” (“Aikibudō Newsletter”) from 1991 there are only the names of the schools represented by CAKP: daitō-ryū aikijūjutsu, aikidō yoseikan and katori shintō-ryū. There is also a piece of information about Floquet's aikibudō, drawings of a few techniques from his system, the first part of the lexicon and shortened technical program.

The next newsletter was Publisher in Rzeszów in 1993 presenting the same logo created by W. J. Cynarski (later accepted by PUKiA and SIP), the same names of schools, a piece of information about Polish participation in summer trainings in France, news from PUKiA in Rzeszów, the second part of the lexicon, program and techniques – including for the first time in Poland the beginning of the ikkajō idori form from daitō-ryū aikijūjutsu. The techniques were performed by W. J. Cynarski with R. Wyskiel, photos were taken by M. Miś, drawings were made on the basis of the photos by T. Goclan.

In 1990–1993 the general secretary of PUKiA Publisher articles about aikibudō and kobudō in such magazines as „Czarny Pas” („The Black Belt”) and „Wojownik” (“The Warrior”) [Cynarski 1990 b; 1992 a; b; c; d; e; 1993 a; b; c]. Later for two years he tried to promote mainly takeda-ryū and the teachings of master Maroteaux¹⁸. Finally in 1997 sensei W. J. Cynarski Publisher two articles which described the place of aikijutsu teaching in the structure of the idōkan budō SIP program and the first in Poland scientific article about the history of aikijutsu [Cynarski 1997 a; b; c]. Simultaneously in his papers in „Biuletyny Sōbudō” („Sabudo Newsletters”) this author relates events from the history of aikibudō and aikijutsu in Poland. The analysis of the contents of the newsletters shows that in relation to martial arts practiced in SIP (yōshin-ryū jūjutsu, zendō karate, kobudō, iaidō) varieties based on the aiki principle made up a significant percentage of the magazine:

- 1994 – aikibudō – 20,6% (pp. 14); aikijutsu (takeda-ryū) – 29,4% (pp. 20)
- 1995 – aiki-jūjutsu i aikibudō – 6,4%; aikijutsu – 21,3%
- 1996 – aiki-jūjutsu – 10,3%; aikijutsu – 36,8%
- 1997 – aiki-jūjutsu – 3,1%; aikijutsu – 21,9%.

¹⁷ The magazine of Kick-Boxing and Far-Eastern Martial Arts „Karateka”, 1991, p. 46.

¹⁸ See: writing – magazines and press.

The above show proportion reflects changes in the leader and the SIP activists' involvement in different varieties of budō especially in classical aikijutsu. Undoubtedly the aim was to show these noble and subtle martial arts to the SIP practitioners in order to make them more common in Poland. Nonetheless in books published later the explanations and reflection concerning aikijutsu is far Belter documented and placed in a wider cultural context [Cynarski 2000; 2004 a].

The level of certain papers aiming at popularization of aikijutsu or aiki-jūjutsu in a popular specialist magazine „Samurai” was rather embarrassing, which concerns both the presentation of self-defence techniques, content mistakes (mistaking the names of the forms and techniques, e.g. ikkajō with ikkyō etc.), spelling mistakes of people's and places names, transcription etc. [compare: Śliwka 2002]. Nevertheless in „Samurai” several papers promoting different varieties of aikijutsu and related systems were Publisher [Cynarski 1995 b]. It was not until 2000 when an article presenting the Janssens's system of aiki-jūjutsu appeared [Cynarski S. 2000]. It was not meaningless that S. Cynarski was at that time the vicepresident of PFJJ – the organization established and directed by M. Śliwka who was the publisher and editor of the above mentioned magazine. It was he who was most frequently promoted in the magazine, his school and federation and sometimes his colleagues (but very cautiously due to competition on the free market of martial arts).

Organizational division – summary

As in the whole of budō so in his field certain pluralism and multi-shaping are impossible to avoid. Changeable ways of leaders and stormy lots of new great organizations established for once elitist, ancient martial arts are probably a sign of occurring for only the last 20 years processes of democratization, institutionalization and even globalization of aikijutsu. Until recently it was a martial art taught only in private Japanese schools with the rule of social relations from the feudal epoch.

The environment of takeda-ryū is divided similarly to most varieties of presently practised aikijutsu. New leaders set up their schools and organizations as it takes place in Japan and on the global scale. Therefore the situation is not better in Poland. And how is it related to the ethics simple as the cut of a samurai sword? Does it result from searching for shortcuts or rather searching for one's own way – a new synthesis, further development of aikijutsu? Is the main motive a greater ease of reaching for master's degrees and titles or the Reed to work independently as a teacher and martial arts trainer?

In turn Floquet, Janssens, Maroteaux and S. Cynarski realize their own concept, method or school of aikijutsu. The instructor Grzegorz Skibniewski from Bytom left sensei Stanisław Cynarski for Tair Narimanov and PZJJ and he practises contact jūjutsu. Jacek Jastrzębski promoted for 1 dan by sensei Śliwka left him and represents the 'school' of S. Cynarski in Krakow. Grzegorz Kuzara, who received the degrees of 4 kyū in aikibudō and 6 kyū in jūjutsu from sensei W. J. Cynarski, in a short time was promoted for the black belt in jūjutsu by one of the organizations in Krakow. Therefore there are crossings in both directions between related styles of Japanese martial arts. Contemporary warriors look for their own ways and they are not very eager to cultivate old traditions rejecting faithfulness, loyalty and obedience to their teachers.

One must conclude here that there is no organizational stability in the Polish environment of aikijutsu. Instructors and disciples pass from one organization to another, the organizations themselves change (both names and the associations which they comprise) and new ones are established. Although e.g. in Poland due to its merits for the development the center in Tarnów is the most significant – PSAJJ and shihan S. Cynarski, but Tarnów does not play the role of the capital of so divided movement. Centralization does not work in his mosaic movement as it also applies to various martial arts and the world phenomenon of martial arts [Cynarski 2000; 2004 a; 2005 b; Cynarski, Obodyński 2005 c]. A chance for the positive further development is rather cooperation of people and organizations as it has happened in case of the chain PFDSzW – PCJJ – PSAJJ – SIP – DDBV etc. Sometimes it is a three-dimensional structure with multi-level and multi-directional connections.

One may predict that as the organizations reach certain institutional maturity only the best aikijutsu organizations will survive with marginal role player by others or even their disappearance. It will be verified by the market and in time the more and more demanding, thanks to his or her greater knowledge about martial arts and physical culture, disciple. Thus, instructors should pay great attention to the level of their competence which will imply the necessity of training with the best experts.

Słowa kluczowe: sztuki walki, aikijutsu, rozwój organizacyjny, liderzy

STRESZCZENIE

W artykule ukazany został rozwój organizacyjny oraz nauczanie aikijutsu na tle współczesnej historii tej starojapońskiej sztuki walki w Europie i w Polsce. Opis dotyczy lat od zaistnienia aikijutsu takeda-ryū w Europie (1987) do roku 2004, w którym jeden z polskich instruktorów uzyskał tytuł mistrzowski w jednej z odmian aikijūjutsu. Autorzy koncentrują się głównie na kanałach przekazu oryginalnej tradycji klasycznych szkół daitō-ryū i takeda-ryū. Opisują rozlamy powodowane walką o sukcesję, władzę lub też inne wzgłydy.

Zastosowano metodę analityczną w oparciu o materiały źródłowe i literaturę, a także metody obserwacji uczestniczącej, wywiadu bezpośredniego oraz analizy treści przekazu wybranych specjalistycznych czasopism i prasy.

Autorzy wskazują, że także w tej dziedzinie swoisty pluralizm i wielopostaciowość są nieuniknione. Zmienne drogi liderów i burzliwe losy nowych dużych organizacji powstających dla elitarnych kiedyś, wielowiekowych sztuk walki są zapewne przejawem zachodzących dopiero od około 20 lat procesów demokratyzacji, upowszechnienia i instytucjonalizacji sztuki walki aikijutsu.
